

The Oregon State Bar is proud to present

Willamette University College of Law

An original painting by OSB member Tom Elden, on loan from Willamette University College of Law.

This abstract represents people of different races entering the Willamette University College of Law, with Lady Justice standing watch. Tom's painting was purchased by Willamette, with half of the proceeds going to the Willamette Auction for Legal Aid. Tom saw diversity develop within the Oregon legal community as an active member of the Oregon State Bar and the Marion County Bar. He retired from the Oregon Department of Justice in 2011 and his experience and travels continue to inspire his creative efforts. Tom taught and mentored at Willamette and hired many law clerks from the school. His youngest daughter graduated second in her class at Willamette.

*We benefit from racial diversity for a hundred reasons.
Our law schools value lawyers whose diverse racial backgrounds enrich our ability to serve all Oregonians.*
